Номакова, Остовев 24ти, 1873.

We mentioned recently that the Rev. Mr. Bugnon, of Pekin, had accepted the Bishoprick of Hongkong, and might be expected shortly in the Colony, on his way home for ordination. The present is, therefore, a suitable opportunity for reverting to a consideration of the ecclesiastical matters of the Colony, as doubtless the Bishop designate will be desirous on his arrival to obtain all the information possible, and we trust will endeavour to rectify one or two matters to which attention has already been frequently directed, unfortunately without-success, as for some time past there has been nobody whose position specially called upon him to act in regard to them.

The first point to which it would be very desirable that the Rev. gentleman's attention ould be directed, is the heavy amount c work which is thrown upon the Colonial Chaptain, and the absolute need of two active Church of England clergymen in the place. There is a vast amount of work which has to be performed by a Colonial Chaplain, in addition to that which comes before the public in Church. There are prisoners and sick to visit, charitable and other useful objects to be furthered, burials, murriages, and other calls upon the Chaplain's time, not to mendoe one very important part of his duties. that of calling upon the members of his Church, and bringing his influence to some extent to bear personally upon them. . When it is considered how much time and thought, such multifarious duties demand, it will be obvious that they are a very severe tax upon scially in a climate like this, where people however, were in many cases well made, and cannot undergo the same amount either of the seting good, though not so much so as mental or bodily fatigue that can be undergone with impunity at home.

It has always been a subject of regrot that the Bishops in Hongkong have confined themselves too much to their mere Episcopa functions, and have given but libtle of their energies to the duties so much more required here of active Ministers: It must, of course, rest with the new Bishop himself to decide to a great extent how far he will, so to say, place himself in harness; but it seems to us that an active minded and carnost minister. can scarcely trail to give the Colony, his services in this respect, where aid is so much

It is unfortunate that, as the Bishop is paid from a private fund, the Colony has not any absolute claim upon his services; and we whether it would not be well to supplement smount, on condition of his taking the joint position of Minister and Bishop, that is to say, taking a recognised and active part in very fairly. the ordinary run of work which has to be performed by the clergy in the Colony. It the Bishop should not be willing to do this. the question of appointing a resident curate is one which ought to be considered. It is true that a great deal of aid is given by Military, Maval, and other clergy from time to time in the place; but it is obvious that this is not of a sufficiently reliable character to afford any relief to the Colonial Chaplain; as would be the case werd he rogularly resieved of a pertion of the work.

Another matter which should command the attention of the new Bishop, is the question of what is to be done with regard to St. Paul's College. He ought before going home speaking prose, when he came to the common to supply himself with, full information re- place which he assured the audience was comgarding it, and he could then ascertain all mon sense. However, we doubt not all will that is necessary at home, and come out pres pared to see matters put upon a right footing for carrying out the objects with which the justitution was founded. We believe it would he quite possible for him to obtain the necessury powers and information in England, and the fact of his being about to pass through Hongkong on his way, is a fortunate circumstance, as it will enable him to obtain the necessary particulars in advance. We make no doubt that this matter will be brought to the Rev. Mr. Burpon's attention and trust that he will deal with it energetically and effectively.

Matters in France have taken a strange turn. The centre, left, and right, will support a constitutional Monarchy; failing which, conservative Republic. The Comte de Chambord will not agree to anything feasible, and his party, that is, the Ultramontanes support him: Consequently should the required constitution be proposed, the Legitimists will abstain, whon the Bonapartists and the Republicans will outvots them. Then was the time when the doors of the Kraton were covered with silver plates; when the Sultans kept numerous wives and concubines; when their palace was guarded within by a guard, consisting of 3,000 women. and 500 cupuobs, whilst at night, 200 borsemen patrolled outside: when 300 goldsmiths wereconstantly at work in the Kraton; when the Sultan possessed 2,000 pieces of cannon and hundreds of tame clephants. Of all this spiendour not a vestige now re-In a Kraton, fifthy, half fallen in, and even partially destitute of staps, there dwells now a Soltan who has almost wholly lost authority over his vassals, who can with difficulty support out his scanty income the few opining smokers, who make up his following; and who, in all respects, is one of the poorest and most miserable rulers in the Indian

Archipelago." This must necessarily arise from the divisiona manner into which the whole country is parcelled out among a set of bold and greedy retainers, whose leading maxim appears to be every one for himself and old Scratch, for us all," in more than one point of view. Professor Veth onters minutely into the subject, and gives a vivid and complete iden of the present state of affairs in all the districts in question. According to him, the tract directly under the Sultan's rule, which must be carefully distinguished from the dependent states, is divided into three districts, called the XXII, XXV., and XXVI. Jagies or Mukims, according to the number of finited villages the contained: each of these districts is governed by two bereditary bendmen, styled Panglimas, who cannot be deposed, as such, by the Sulian. These six Panglimas form the Council of State. in which the real power resides. The Prime Minister is, at present, an Arab, Habib Abdur Rahman, who seems to have the whole power in his own hands. The Pauglimas inform the Sultan of what they had agreed upon with the village beadmen, which he has simply to assent to. The Sultan must, on the other hand, consuit and Jotuin the approval of the Council of State for all his actions. He cannot name his successor without their approval; should be die without naming one, or should be deposed, the choice of the new Sultan devolves upon the Panglimas. The dethronement of the Sultan, which is effected by the Panglimas, takes place when he has broken the customs of the country, or when he has shown his unfitness for ruling. Hence, he is nothing but the playball (puppet) of these sadmen, who are not backward in reproacheyes when he gives occasion for it. They feel not the least fear of his wrath, which can have no effect on them, because they alone possess

authority over the majority of the population.

characters who have entered his service. The revenue of the country is granted by the pay each of them five catties of gold yearly. which he is often unable to do. The Sultan's income consists of a 5 per cent, import duty levied on all foreign vessels at Acheen. No export duties are paid; no other tax exists. Ritter estimates the amount of the duties at from 15,000 to 18,000 dollars, which must be diminished by the Pauglimas' allowances. Besides this, there is the tribute from the vassals. so far as it can be collected; it is the custom that this should be set apart for the support and consisting of bulf a dollar on every exported picul of pepper, was assigned to Rajah account of refusal to pay tribute, attacked by sea and land by thousands of Achinese. But termed its dependencies, are to a certain extent, borne out by a correspondent of the Friend of India, who lately paid the Kraton a visit. He describes it, as well as its surroundings, as a duty as a body guard. And as a sign as to how. "they certainly barbour ranaway convicts, for I saw several men with the tattoo marks of the Burman and Straits juils on their forcheads," reasonable to conclude, that the presence and services of criminals of a deeper dye from any

THE FRENCH TREATY WITH In pursuance of a motion made in the House of Commons on the 29th July, an official translation of the Treaty concluded between the Shanghai Steam Navigation Company-Tis. 108 French and the Barmese Governments January last has been issued from the Foreign. office. It is preceded by the "statement of motives," as it is termed in French diplomatic Hongkong Hotel Company's Shares—54 per procedure, which led to the conclusion of the Treaty; which are thus set down :-The Government signed, with Burmah, on the 24th of January last, a Commercial Convention, which we have the honour to submit for the approval of the Assembly. A Burmese Ambasador, provided with special powers, having come over to express to us in the name of his Sovereign a desire to establish between the two countries relations of friendship and commerce, his overtures were favourably received by us. Although Burmab, inclosed on three sides by the British possessious which separate it from the sea, is not so situated as to take a very active part, in the general movement of international exchanges, we were bound not to neglect this opportunity of facilitating access for French merchandise to a new market in the extreme East; moreover, we could not do otherwise than give proofs of good feeling towards a Government whose proceedings bore witness at the same time to its sympathy for France, and to those tendencies towards civilisation which cannot be too much encouraged in the Asiatic Powers. It would, besides, have been premature to have, inserted in the Convention those numerous clauses on matters of detail of which our Treaties, with countries where we have interests of some importance to protect

. We confined purselves then, after having stipulated for the treatment of the most favoured nation for our countrymen, our commerce. and our Diplomatic and Consular agents, to procuring the acceptance of a few articles of more special, import, the object of which is to guarantee, for the products exchanged between the two countries, a maximum tariff of five per cent.; both on entering and on leaving Burmese territory : to-confer on French-Consula cognisance of differences between French and Burmese suijects, and lastly, to scoure for French missionaries the same favoors and immunities as are enjoyed in Burmah by the missionaries of every other nation. We have besides expressly reserved to ourselves the right of completing these several provisions by further arrangements. You will not hesitate, gentlemen. I hope, to sanction stipulations which constitute a new extension of our conventional rights in the extreme East, and to authorise, by voting the project of law which we present to you, the exchange of the ratifications of this international instrument. The text of the Treaty is annexed, and is as

The President of the French Republic and his Majesty the King of the Burmese, desiring to establish between France and Burmah rolations of amity and commerce, which they reserve to themselves to consolidate and extend by the conclusion of further arrangements, have to this end named as their Plenipotentiaries, that is to say :- The President of the French Republie, M. Charles de Rémusat, Minister for Foreign Affairs, &c., &c., his Majesty the: King of the Burmese, Mengyee Maha Saythoo Kenyoon Mengyee, his Ambassador; Who having exchanged their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following Articles, :--

I.=Frenchmen in Burinah and Burinese aubjects in France shall be allowed freely to reside, travel, trade, buy lands, sell them, cultivate them; and build on them, in conformity with the law of the country. They shall enjoy full and entire protection for their families and property, as well as all the advantages or privileges which are now or may be aventually accorded to the subjects of the most favoured nation. French missionaries shall enjoy in Burmab the same favours and immunities as the missionaries of any other nation. Frenchmen travelling in Burmah in the interests of science, geographers, naturalists, and others, shall receive from the Burman authorities every assistance of which they may stand in need for the success of their investigations. Burmese subjects shall enjoy reciprocally the same facilities in Franco. II.—Merchandise which Frenchmen may import into, or export out of, Burmab, and reciprocally merchandise which Burmese subjects may import into, or export out of France, shall neither pay different nor higher duties than if they had been imported or exported by the inhabitants of the country, or by foreigners belonging to the most favoured nation. Burmese products in France-and-French-products in Burmah shall enjoy the same treatment as similar foreign products of the most favoured mation. The Burmese Government, anxious to encourage the development of commercial exchanges between France and Burmah, engages. not to impose upon the articles exchanged any Customs duty at a rate exceeding 5 per cent. of their value. After the payment of the import duty, the merchandise, into whose hands soever it may pass, shall not be subjected in Burmah to any further tax or import of any sort.

III.—The two Governments recognise reciprocally the right of each to maintain a diplomatic agents at the other's Court, and to name Consuls or Consular agents, wherever the interests of their subjects or citizens may require them. These agents shall be entitled to hoist the flag of their country, and they shall enjoy personally, as well as in the exercise of their office, the same protection and the same immunities and prerogatives which are or may subsequently be accorded to the agents of the same rank of the most favoured nation:

IV .- The Burmese Government desiring to facilitate, as far as it can, the settlement of Frenchmen in Burmah, it is agreed that the Burmese authorities shall not interfere in differences between Frenchmen; and that differ ences between Frenchwen and Burmese aubjects shall be decided by a mixed tribunal, composed of the Consul and of a Burmese official of high rank.

in Burmab, or of a Burmese subject in France, ciation. the effects of the deceased shall be remitted to his heirs; and in default of these, to the Consul of his nation, who shall undertake their transmission to the proper parties.

VI.—The present Convention shall remain in force, from year to year, so long as neither Government shalf have announced to the other, a year in advance, its intention of putting un end to its operation. It shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged within the space of one year, or sooner, if possible. It shall be put into execution as acon as this exchange shall bave taken place. In faith of which the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed this Convention: and have affixed their scale thereto:

The Graphio, in an article on present fashions, says :- " As to bonnets and hats, some of our readers will hear with surprise that specimens are shown at the Vienna Exhibition made of glass! The time is probably at hand when our bonnets and, windows may be cleaned at the same time. A contemporary states that 'the hat is made of loose pieces of glass, fastened closely together by a gutta percha band, which allows it to conform to the head. Inside there is adining of silk, and the trimmings are various, being for the most part birds and flowers.  $\mathbf{FOR}$  comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalfed. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle bitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margine and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. THEOPHILUS JENKS PREPARES FOR THE STEAMER.

Theu Jonks resolutely undertook to bring bis mind to it. "How long will it take?" he inquired. "Ob, three hours or so," I replied carelessly. "Do we go out of sight of land?" "No, you sail down the river a few miles, then you strike the ocean, and just hug the shore until you get there," I replied. "Yes; strike the ocean-hug the shore-" he mumbled to himself, looking down and rubbing the bald spot on the top of his head. " Strike the ecen-hug the shore. Three hours-oh! do you know whether they have life-preservers on that steamboat?" "Stacks of them." I replied. "I've seen them often." "Wouldn't it he a good plan to slip one on to the horse's neck when they start? He'll think it's a collar, and won't be scared, you know; and if there should happen to be anytrouble it would help to keep his nose up." "Capital plan," I responded. "What time pany at current rates, subject to a discount of do we start?" "At eight o'clock to-morrow 20 per cent. morning." Jenks retired with the look and bearing of a man who had been sentenced to be hanged. He went first to the stable, and made all the necessary arrangements there, and late into the night I heard him moving about his room. I presume he did not once. close his eyes in sleep that night. I was exceedingly amused by his nervousness, though I would not have intimated to him that I had ind other Vessels on Navigable Rivers and, any doubt of his courage, for the world. "You will have a lovely day, Jenks," I said, as he banded me my coffee. As he bent to set the cup beside my plate, there came close to my ear a curious crepitant rustle. "What have you got about you, Jenks? I inquired. He' made a sickly attempt to smile, and then pulling open the bosom of his shirt, displayed a collapsed, dry bladder, with a goose-quill in the nock ready for its inflation. "That's a capital idea, Jenks," I said. "Do you think so? What. do you think of that? and he showed me the breast pocket of his coat full of corks. It was impossible for me to restrain my laughter any longer. "Number one, you know," said Jenks, buttoning up his coat. UNLUCKY COMPLIMENTS. The worst blunder in what was intended for a pretty speech that I over heard of, however, was perpetrated in modern times by a lignitary of the Church, who was asked to marry a young couple in a country place bride and bridegroom at the subsequent breakfast. "To sun up all our good wishes for the happy pair whom we have seen united this morning," he said in conclusion, "we cannot, I am sure, do better than express lesire that the result of their union may prove strictly analogous to that of the parents of the fair bride." Whereupon the "fair bride" went into hysterics; the bridegroom's eyes flashed daggers; the bridesmaids coloured and looked down; the master of the house blew his nose violently. He who had caused all this commotion wisely sat down and held his peace, wondering at the effect of his innocent compliment to the host and hostess. He soon, however, found some one to enlighten him.
